

Mauro Luis Ruffino

Coordinator of the ACTO Regional Project for the Management, Monitoring and Control of Wild Fauna and Flora Species Threatened by Trade (Bioamazon Project).

Coordinator of the Amazon Regional Observatory (ARO).

Master's degree in oceanography from the Universidad Federal de Rio Grande (FURG).

During his career of over 30 years, he has participated in international projects in Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Bangladesh, Bolivia, Colombia, Panama, Argentina, Paraguay and Mozambique; in addition to his work for Brazilian government agencies.

His experience in Bilateral Technical Cooperation was acquired with Germany (GIZ), United Kingdom (DFID) and Financial Cooperation (KfW and World Bank).

He has broad experience in the following fields: (i) management and conservation of natural resources and fisheries; (ii) technical, financial and monitoring management of international cooperation projects; (iii) organizational development, institutional strengthening, capacity building; (iv) moderation of meetings and events; (v) management and monitoring of terrestrial and aquatic protected areas; (vi) environmental and land tenure regularization in the Amazon; (vii) shared management of natural resources; (viii) strategic and budgetary planning; (ix) norms and procedures for regularization processes and registry monitoring; (x) inter-institutional articulation; (xi) public policy development; (xii) project design; and (xiii) search for project financing.

Since 2020, he has served as coordinator of the Bioamazon Project of the Amazon Cooperation Treaty Organization (ACTO) and the Amazon Regional Observatory (ARO).